LITTLE HOPE IS HELD FOR LOST SUB CREW

British Ships Seek to Raise Sunken L-24; Fear All Aboard Have Perished

London, Jan. 11 (U.P.).—The British submarine L-24, rammed by the Deutschland, is lying 30 fathoms deep about 11 miles south of Portland, according to the latest reports from Weymouth. There is nothing to indicate that the crew of 47 men have perished.

It is reported, but not confirmed, that the submarine K-12, badly damaged in a collision with another ship near the scene of the L-24 disaster, has sunk in shallow water.

It is taken for granted that all the men on the L-24 were below when the boat left Portland for the maneuvers in which she was to take part, as the weather was too heavy to allow them to remain on deck.

Full further investigation has been made it is impossible to tell just how the disaster happened. However, the latest report says that the L-24 rose beneath the Deutschland and struck the latter's bows. Last night was unusually dark and foggy, the numerous search lights brought into play little could be done until daylight, but the salvage craft, kept busy while special boats equipped with hydroplanes, although vainly, to catch any sounds that might be made by the marooned crew.

Hope of the crew's safety has not been entirely abandoned, yet most experts think it will be miraculous if the men are rescued. The submarine's commander, Lieutenant Commander Eddis, was a man of much experience and there is confidence that he would know what to do in the tragic circumstances.

Washington—Opposition to the proposed consolidation of the War and Navy Departments under the departmental reorganization plan was reiterated today by Secretary Weeks and Denby, before the Congressional reorganization committee.

CITY RECORDS SEIZED IN CAMBRIDGE

Ordered Impounded by Judge Brown in Probe of Alleged Graft

All records of the Cambridge City Council for the past five years were impounded by Judge John P. Brown, in the Middlesex Superior Criminal Court after City Clerk Frederick H. Burke had testified before the Grand Jury investigating the alleged Cambridge city graft.

Judge Brown ordered the minutes impounded after a plea by District Attorney Arthur K. Reading, P. J. Delaney, who appeared as counsel for Burke, opposed Reading's plea.

State officer Edward H. O'Neil and Miss Mary O'Neil, Burke's assistant, accompanied him when he appeared in response to the Grand Jury summons. Miss O'Neil carried several books. Zosian Nosowski appeared as a witness before the Grand Jury.

Several true bills were expected to be returned against the Grand Jury made a partial report to Judge Brown today.

The investigation of Cambridge municipal affairs has been conducted by state police attached to the district attorney's office, private detectives and secret service agents.

The investigation is understood to concern the allowing of permits by city officials.

A $1200 contribution in a recent Cambridge city campaign also is said to be under investigation.

It is generally agreed in Cambridge court circles that full details of the investigation are about to be made public.

The summons for Burke was issued following a conference between Assistant District Attorney Robert T. Hoadley and City Clerk Burke and Francis D. Conely. The latter is under indictment for the alleged acceptance of a bribe.

Approximately thirty persons have been summoned to appear before the grand jury thus far. Among these are some city officials, one prominent in Cambridge business life, and persons whose business depends upon the granting of permits.

District Attorney Reading, in speaking of the impounding of the council books, said the books would be thoroughly gone over by the investigators.

"We want to know what's what," he said. "Every effort will be made to learn if there has been any tampering with the Cambridge city finances."

Mayor Edward W. Quinn of Cambridge professed ignorance of the Grand Jury proceedings when interviewed by a representative of the American. He declared he knew no reason why the council books should be impounded.

PEOPLE talk of a "saturation" in the motor industry. Henry Ford replies by manufacturing in 1920 125,377 more automobiles and trucks than he manufactured in 1921.

There is no such thing as "saturation" in the automobile world. People buy cars as they use up, buy others.

The farmers in the country used to buy two million buggies every year. We only manufacture four million automobiles now. At this moment the country ought easily to absorb six or seven million cars a year. Every car pays for itself in time-saving and regaining economy.

PRELATES WARN BAVARIANS OF SEPARATION

Catholic Clergy Declare War Would Follow Secession of Palatinate

Speyer, Bavaria, Palatinate, Jan. 11.—The sanguinary events here, including the assassination of Herlitz, President of the Autonomous government, and other step assistant leaders, were followed today by the issuance of a manifesto by the Higher Roman Catholic Bishops in the Palatinate declaring the secession of the Palatinate from the Reich and Bavaria would involve danger of a national conflict and warlike developments.

Their sentiments of loyalty, they set forth, compelled them to regard the so-called Autonomous Palatinate as non-existent, and they urged that measures be taken which would facilitate the functioning of the regular government as speedily as possible.

The Protestant clergy, it is stated, have decided to issue a manifesto along the same lines.

Utica, N. Y., Jan. 11 (U.S.S.)

The late Henry P. Mass field, textile magnate, became so infatuated in other women after the death of his first wife he fell in love with a wax figure in a show window, was the startling testimony given before a jury in Saratoga County today by relatives of the dead man in an effort to have him set aside.

From their attic into the sewers, clogging the pipes and arousing the ire of the city authorities, John applied real efficiency to his business and utilized the product regarded by his neighbors as worthless.

He purchased a sawing, lifted up from a farmer, placed the cut in the cellar of his home and then proceeded to fatten it with the refuse from his still.

When Sergeant John Flynn broke into the house, late at night, he found a big still in operation on the first floor in the basement, the pig, grown into adult proportions, was contentedly eating the old man. A quantity of moonshine whiskey was also found.

In South Boston Court Judge Langan fined Makouska $50 for illegal possession of liquor.

Just to show that he appreciated the bootlegger's efficiency, the judge placed on an additional fine on the charge of keeping a pig without sanction from the health authorities.

375 PAIRS GIVE CUPID BACK HIS ARROW

That Many Couples Who Filled Marriage Intentions Failed to Make Good

While Dan Cupid did a hand of business in 1923, placing 8,473 marriage intentions in the hands of City Registrar Edward Matthews at City Hall, his dart slipped 275 times.

Result, at least 750 lonely hearts in Boston today.

Of the 375 marriage intentions left over last year 228 of the applicants who paid $1.02 for a white card failed to return and the applications remained at the end of six months.

114 were taken out, but were returned by either bride or groom, and twenty-three were cancelled before the five-day limit was reached.

Assistant City Registrar Joseph A. Cobian presented fifteen cases for making false statements on marriage intentions, such as false age and claiming to be white when they were colored. There are some of the excuses attached to the uncanceled for applications.

Bride changed mind.
Bride died before marriage.
Groom does not wish to marry.
Mother objects, will not give consent.

Bride never knew groom was divorced; refused to marry him.
Returned to be married later.
False statements as to bride's age.

Divorce papers wanted never brought in.
False age; said fifty-five, is sixty-five; bride only twenty.
Divorce still in force; time not expired.

Time expired on first license; girl refused to have a second license issued.
False statement as to number of marriages.

Bride only fifteen; said sixteen; never same back.
False statement—husband not dead.
Two licenses applied for different women; first one not returned.

OPENING TOMORROW MEN!

Why I Am Here!

There must be a reason for everything—and you can bet your life there is a reason why I started this store.

If I were just a common clothier with the average experience and buying connection I would never think of investing my money in this store—because Boston is already crowded with clothiers.

But I have been working for years on a merchandising plan, and I have finally put it into effect. I won't give you the details of my plan, but one of the greatest clothing values ever established marvelous buying connections with some of America's foremost manufacturers.

What's more, I always pay cash.

The only reason I am here is because I know I can give you better clothing values—and it won't take you men long to find it out. Thus I'll build up the greatest clothing business in the city. Visit me tomorrow—inspect my merchandise and prices, and compare!

Yours for a new era in correct clothing values,

Riley

HOPPE LEADS COCH-RAN IN FIRST BLOCK OF BILLIARD MATCH

CHAMPION IN FRONT 500 TO 376

Title Battle With Dundee for Bout Victor Tonight

New York, Jan. 11.—(Walter) Dundee, former intermediate champion, defeated John Hoppe, world's champion, in the first block of the title battle tonight at Madison Square Garden.

Dundee, 500 to 376, in the first block in the 1,500 point challenge match for the world's championship.

Continued of the ball which "chilled" the visitors and rendered them inoperative, kept the score down.

HOPPE, DEBONAIR AND COOL
was in splendid form, smiling, debonair, more than customarily cool and rattled off his shots with all the nonchalant of a mechanically perfect automaton.

At all times he seemed confident that he possessed the upper hand. His play was so efficient, whittling lack in spectacular tactics.

Cochran gained honors for the high run, clicking off a beautifully executed gather of 145 points in the seventh inning.

The champion reached his apex in the seventh session, scoring the 145 points for a total run of 145.

Cochran won the bank and in the first inning, clicked off 45 points and moved on an easy draw shot.

The champion, playing truly magnificent billiards, ran off thirty-five points in masterful fashion, winning the sixth inning on a finely-executed three-run drive.

He then proceeded to rattle off 44 more points, finishing a 90 point run when he missed a difficult mass shot.

COCH-RAN HAD GOOD POSITION FOR THE RECORD.
In the second inning Cochran had good position and knocked off thirty-four points, missing a two-cushion shot.

Bunker Hill Boys' Club to Clash with Pittsfield

Folk in the shadow of Bunker Hill will see the first of tomorrow night's novelties of the Boston boys' club and the Pittsfield boys' club basketball teams at the Charleston home of the local quints. This is to be the first of a long series of games to determine the title of the boys' clubs in the State.

Cochran's team is spending lots of its cherished time grooming the youth of the Charleston district for this tussle. For the past few years this team has kept tight on the heels of the best of them. The Hub team will have Captain John Powers, "Chink" Gleason and Jim Irons, barker.

"Doc" Thompson, center; William Geary, John Carven and Walter McQuay will clash at the forward position. For Marquette K. O. expects to open its basketball season on Jan. 22 with some warm opponent at the South Boston High school.

In past years the Key has been the best basketball team in the State and are out to make a clean sweep this season as did the football team. Any who prove too good to back it is the Boston boys' club.

The Malden Pros are anxious to play the last professional game in the State. At 400 Linden street, Everett or Tel. Congress 3170.

LATE TYPIST WORK IS RUSE OF SPOONERS

Grace Madden Unmasks Another Wily Romeo in Her Experiences

By GRACE MADDEN
Copyright, 1924, by Grace Madden
In the wily world of the typewriter, there are many who are as crafty as the fox. One of these is the late typist, who has been known to play many a trick on his employers. In the case of the late typist, the trick was to make his work appear to be of a high quality, while in reality it was of a very poor quality. This was done by using a special type of paper and ink, which made his work appear to be of a high quality, while in reality it was of a very poor quality.

Ambassador Moore Goes on Ice-Cream Soda Jag

New York, Jan. 11 (Universal).—When Alexander L. Moore, United States Ambassador to Spain, arrived in New York, presumably important reports for the President waited while he consumed, slowly and with gusto, eight ice cream sodas of a visit.

The holder of the record for the greatest number of sodas in a short time, then went to Mrs. William H. Hough's house in his home. "You see," explained the Ambassador, "I have been thinking for a long time of the fact that I was in Spain. Well, there were millions of it. I wanted only ice cream soda."

It is not that he did not find the soda, but that he did not find the time to drink it. He was so busy with his work that he did not have time to drink it. He was so busy with his work that he did not have time to drink it. He was so busy with his work that he did not have time to drink it.

All Kinds, Some Comment

Alexander Hamilton would rub his eyes today. When he was our financial wizard the national debt, foreign and domestic, and the Revolutionary War debts of the States aggregated about eighty million dollars.

New York State's government alone will cost $155,000,000 next year, nearly twice the debt which staggered the young republic.

Let this make us vain, let us reflect that Antares, the King of Stars, has a diameter of 400,000,000 miles, while our world's diameter is only 8,000 miles. Nor can we boast of the size of our sun. The Milky Way has millions of stars beside which our sun is but a candle.

Still we do fairly well for provincials. The other night Mr. Nightingale, of the Westinghouse Electric Company, at Pittsburgh, sang for his mother in Manchester, England, 3,500 miles away, and she heard him distinctly.

If you plunder a recent tomb you're a grave robber, but if you plunder a very old tomb you're an archaeologist. Tut's pursuers are all archaeologists. According to Hoyle, Tut should have had his brains and other organs removed and the cavities filled with spices, then been packed in salt and soda for seventy days and finally washed and wrapped in a thousand yards of linen.

Egyptians used to worship their ancestors. That's why they embalmed, and unless this generation is utterly hopeless, it regards this expedition as profane.

What would England do if a party of Egyptians should break into Westminster Abbey, go behind the high altar and drag forth the body of Edward the Confessor?

The Boston Tea Party helped England lose her American colonies, but Sir Charles Higham is coming here from London to start a tea-drinking drive. Tea was cultivated in India and China over 2,000 years ago and introduced into Europe in the sixteenth century, when it sold as high as fifty dollars a pound.

Coffee started in Abyssinia, went round the Mediterranean in the fifteenth century, overcame Mohammedan opposition, which classed it as intoxicating, and took Turkey by storm. It entered Europe in 1650, and in 1754 a Franciscan monk took a plant to Rio de Janeiro, starting in Brazil the greatest coffee business in the world. We drink the most coffee and Great Britain the most tea.

One of our vice-consuls has been shot in the leg by Mexican soldiers. This recalls the late dodging period in American history, when Mexicans continued to shoot us, until finally it got to be such poor sport they quit in disgust and went back to bull fighting.

It seems to be less majestic for anybody in the public service to question Secretary Hughes' Russian views. The War Department is investigating Captain Paxton Hibben of the Army Reserve Corps, who favors trade relations with Moscow. Hibben used to be in the diplomatic service, went through the World War, and later served with the Russian relief expedition.

Lady Terrington, recently elected to Parliament, was kissed by many of her male constituents. This is not surprising to us, as American politics is largely a game of post-office.

General Smedley D. Butler of the marines, in charge of the morals of the city of Philadelphia, tells the police that they must "rid Philadelphia of vice in forty-eight hours or quit their jobs." He won't rid Philadelphia, or any little village, or any other collection of human beings, of vice in forty-eight hours, forty-eight years, or forty-eight centuries. The roots of evil go down too deep and back too far.

But such enthusiasm as that of General Butler of the marines is useful. The forty-eight-hour ultimatum, reaching back through fifty thousand years, has gradually made the people better, little by little.

You can't really do anything in a hurry. But, none the less, it's a good thing to feel that you CAN. Trying to do MUCH, you at least accomplish a little.

There are in the United States 15,281,295 automobiles of all kinds, passenger cars, trucks, included. That is about one self-moving vehicle for every seven persons. But it isn't enough.

Get Your Sleep

Never Mind Foolish Theories

Somebody representing a new religion "to revive the world" is coming from Europe to teach Americans that "a minimum of sleep" purifies the spirit. Maybe it does, but it also shortens life.

If Napoleon hadn't bragged about going without sleep, getting along with three or four hours when he was young, he might not have been so sleepy when he landed in Russia and allowed precious days and weeks to go by, doing nothing, drifting to disaster.

If he hadn't bragged about short sleep, and taking only ten or fifteen minutes for his dinner, he might not have been too sleepy to win the Battle of Waterloo and might not have died of blood on the stomach at St. Helena.

Read Lord Rosebery's book on Napoleon's last days. In sleep you recharge your battery, which is your nervous system, and only in sleep is digestion complete.

Whatever you do to yourself, never disturb the sleep of a child. Long sleep, sound and UNDISTURBED, is the child's salvation. To awaken a sleeping child is a crime against the future.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

IT'S a funny thing! You'd never dream of teaching little Rosie that it will be up to someone else to wash her ears for her when she grows up. You just naturally expect, and train her to expect, that she's going to attend to that job herself. Likewise, you expect her to feed herself and give herself fresh air and read her own books and newspapers. "Only idiots would expect to have such things done for them!" you protest with scorn. Sure, you're perfectly right. And yet—you expect some man to do something for little Rosie which is quite as much her personal responsibility as washing her ears or eating her food.

YOU EXPECT SOME MAN TO MAKE HER HAPPY WHEN SHE'S MARRIED. AND YOU TRAIN LITTLE ROSIE TO EXPECT IT. And then some day the man is too busy or tired or humbly pleased to carry Rosie's job as well as his own, and leaves it to her to find her own happiness, and—what happens? Rosie thinks she has been cruelly misused, and protests—there's a divorce. Whose fault is it? Yours, my dear. And mine. The fault of all of us who support this fool tradition that a husband should make a wife happy.

I do believe that three-quarters of our marital failures are due to the belief that it's up to Fred to make his Fanny happy, or vice versa. And I also believe that if we weren't led to expect such an impossibility we'd jog right along and make a success of the job. It's all due to the human nature, made in segregating marriage from the rest of human life, and making a lot of impossible romantic theories about marriage which we wouldn't dream of applying to single existence. But human nature is human nature, he married or single. You're never really ONE, although you are married by all the bells and books in Christendom. You're always TWO. And the responsibilities which were yours as an individual remain yours as Mr. and Mrs. That's the natural law, and the spiritual law, and all the romance in the world can't upset that program.

Go back to the jungles, from which we came, and see how these first marriages were planned. Did Carrie Cotylosaur of the late Paleozoic Age expect John Henry Cotylosaur to "make her happy"? I'll say she didn't. She expected them to work on their mutual job, and right there Mr. Cotylosaur's responsibility ended. She was happy—but not according to her nature and ability—but it wasn't her mate's fault if she worked peevishness instead of pleasure within the slimy depths of her Paleozoic soul.

Did Eve expect Adam to make her happy? It isn't on record that she did. She didn't even make a fuss when he blamed the apple eating on her—which in most modern unions would have resulted in a divorce suit on the grounds of cruelty. She, too, strongly expected them to work on their mutual job. Such happiness as came was as much her own affair as the way she trimmed her figleaf gowns. Did your great-grandfather and grandmother in the little brown houses of Europe or the covered wagons of the Western trail demand happiness of each other? Not they! Their sense of personal responsibility was too fine and strong for any such feeble fancy to take root.

But we have sold our rich heritage of human partnership for the messy potlodge of romance. And we're paying for it with a fine case of emotional indigestion. We'll have to go back to the old plan, pal, before we'll ever be cured of that pain—back to an understanding of marriage as part of the glorious adventure of living, with its inevitable quota of hardship. When we think of marriage in that way again we won't be whining if someone doesn't "make me happy." We'll be too proud of our own responsibility to try to wish it on the other chap.

DR. FRANK CRANE ON SUMMING UP THE SALES TAX

By Dr. Frank Crane

IT is not a bad idea to sum up the points in favor of the Sales Tax and keep them in our minds.

The Sales Tax is the simplest of taxes. It collects itself. It requires no complicated bookkeeping. All that is necessary is to add 1 per cent, or so at the end of each bill.

The Sales Tax is a painless tax. The man who pays twenty-five dollars for an overcoat would have no objection to paying twenty-five dollars and twenty-five cents, or if he bought an automobile for one thousand dollars he would not seriously object to paying one thousand dollars and ten dollars.

The Sales Tax would reduce the present army of job-holders—the ever increasing horde of enemies of the American business man who are snoopers into everybody's business and doing their best to exasperate and annoy the generals of prosperity.

The Sales Tax would reduce graft. It might be difficult to prove the charge of graft against the present tax collectors, but it is not very difficult to see that they have a magnificent opportunity for grafting and we have no right to put too much of a strain on human nature.

The Sales Tax would not be a tax upon the poor nor a tax upon the rich; it would be a tax upon everybody, which is the only honest kind of tax there is.

The Sales Tax might exempt farm products and small business enterprises, say under $5,000 a year. In this case every poor man would save it because he would be exempt and the rich man would favor it because he would have something definite and understandable to pay and would not be treated by his government as though he were a crook.

The Sales Tax would be collected all of the time automatically. At present the Income Tax is collected at the end of the year when it disturbs every man's business. The Income Tax collector can come around and dig up your reports for five years back.

The Sales Tax is not an experiment; it has been tried in Canada and works well there, and also in the Philippines and other countries.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON LIGHT ON JUPITER

By Garrett P. Serviss,
Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

Mrs. C. J. D., of Alexandria, Va., asks a question which will interest her from her imaginative way of putting it. "We will suppose," she says, "Jupiter, instead of being in its present position, were to be at that stage of its evolution where mortal man could exist upon it. Then, because of its greater distance from the sun, would the light they saw be fainter than the light we receive? And in the case of Uranus or Neptune, still farther away, would not people be in a state of semi-darkness, or does light hold its power as far as it reaches?"

If we call the distance of Jupiter from the sun five times the earth's distance from the sun it is really a little more, then the illumination received from the sun by the people on Jupiter would be only one-twenty-fifth as bright as that received by the inhabitants of the earth.

The reason of this is that the intensity of the effect produced by a given quantity of light varies inversely as the square of the distance—i. e., as the distance increases the light decreases not in simple proportion of the distance. The square of 5 is 25, therefore the light on Jupiter is reduced twenty-five-fold in brightness as compared with that on the earth. This is not always clearly understood, and I have made a little diagram to help explain it. To simplify matters suppose the sun to be as far away that it appears only as a point of light, like a star. Its radiant energy (which we call light) passes outward from the sun equally in all sides, like a wind blowing in all water moving away from the point where a stone has been thrown in.

We represent in our diagram only a part of this radiation from the sun proceeding from the point and spreading wider and wider as the distance increases. We have drawn, for convenience, seven radial lines, and let us suppose each of the six triangular spaces between them represents a single element of the light energy proceeding from the sun.

In the original drawing (and the proportions will be retained in the printed drawing) a line, one-half inch long, is drawn across the point of rays one inch from the point. It is just wide enough to embrace all of the six elements spoken of, so that we may take it as a standard or unit.

Then, at a distance of two inches from the point, another element, a whole inch in length, has to be drawn to include all of the elements in other words, to capture the whole of the spreading elements. And at the distance of three inches, the circumference has to be as inch and a half long for the same purpose.

So you see plainly that as great a quantity of light falls on the line only half an inch long at a distance of one inch from the point, as falls upon the line one inch long two inches distant.

We shall in a moment, see how the square of the distance comes into play; but first, let us see when we move back the half inch line to a distance of two inches from the point, it intercepts only three instead of six elements of radiation. (These three are made up of two whole and two halves.) Moreover, when the half inch line is put three inches away, it intercepts only two elements.

This proves that if we draw

only with lines instead of surfaces, the light varies inversely with the distance, i. e., when the distance doubles the light is halved. But we do not live as creatures of only one dimension, inhabiting a line made up of a single line. We are conscious of three dimensions—length, breadth and thickness for up and down, and as light comes to us it spreads over the first two dimensions, which make up what we call surfaces. To measure the effect of light we must then consider how much falls upon a given area, or surface, not how much falls upon a single line. But geometrically the extent of a surface is determined by multiplying its length and breadth together. That being so, the area represented by the line as it is long is four times as great as that represented by the half line, while the inch and a half line represents an area nine times as great.

Therefore, by doubling the distance the same amount of light is spread over four times more surface. On the other hand, if the surface remains the same while the distance increases, the quantity of light received on that surface will be one-quarter at double the distance and one-ninth at three times the distance.
